About ArcelorMittal Orbit

The ArcelorMittal Orbit is the UK's tallest sculpture, standing at 114.5 metres tall, towering above all the venues in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park and providing a view of London up to 20 miles into the distance. The viewing galleries are accessed by two high speed lifts and provide stunning panoramic views of London skyline including Canary Wharf, O2, The Gherkin, The Shard, The Walkie Talkie, St Paul's Cathedral, Alexandra Palace and out to Wembley Stadium.

Innovative screens allow visitors to learn about key sights across the capital and the world-famous sporting venues of Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park. There's also two incredible mirrors created by one of the sculpture's creators Sir Anish Kapoor which flip and twist the horizon. After leisurely taking in the views, visitors are encouraged to walk down the 455 steps which spiral around the central column so they fully experience the constantly changing perspectives from every angle. The ArcelorMittal Orbit has full wheelchair access.

Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park is a place unlike any other. Spread across 560 acres of beautiful parklands with historic waterways, famous sporting venues and a vibrant arts and events programme. At the Park's centre sits the former Olympic Stadium, a world-class, multi-use venue that plays host to Premier League football, concerts and international athletics and The Slide at the ArcelorMittal Orbit. As the new heart of east London, the Park will provide an unrivalled education and cultural district housing Sadler's Wells, V&A East, UAL's London College of Fashion and UCL East.
